We fulfill our mission through five key areas:

- Conducting collaborative global health development projects and research
- Training the next generation of leaders and professionals in global health
- Providing innovative and appropriate technical assistance to the center’s global partners
- Participating in multi-way health development programming, education and training with our partners
- Engaging the OSU community and connecting it with the world in collaborative efforts to promote global health

For more information:

Center for Global Health
College of Public Health and Human Sciences
Director
Chunhuei Chi
chunhuei.chi@oregonstate.edu
cfgh@oregonstate.edu
health.oregonstate.edu/global-health

We fulfill our mission through five key areas:

- Conducting collaborative global health development projects and research
- Training the next generation of leaders and professionals in global health
- Providing innovative and appropriate technical assistance to the center’s global partners
- Participating in multi-way health development programming, education and training with our partners
- Engaging the OSU community and connecting it with the world in collaborative efforts to promote global health
SOUTH SUDAN

THE EQUATOR

JORDAN

ETHIOPIA

ESMERALDA, ECUADOR

KOLLA HEALTH CENTER, ETHIOPIA

Our mission: The center is a community of learning and service that brings together faculty, students and staff at Oregon State with alumni and partners around the world to address current and future global health challenges.

Our work is organized into several thematic groups that reflect the expertise of our faculty, yet are flexible to allow for interdisciplinary collaboration. As the center grows, we expect the number and names of thematic groups to evolve.

- Health Systems Strengthening and Governance
- Rural and Migrant Workers’ Health
- Environment and Water
- Global Occupational Health and Safety
- Aging Across the World
- Food Security and Community Nutrition
- Adolescent Reproductive and Sexual Health
- Global Mental Health
- Global Health Workforces
- Disability Across the World
- Women’s Health and Gender Inequity

Making small changes in the big world and big changes in small worlds

We strive to make small changes in the world through collaborative efforts to improve health and well-being around the world. Our partners include non-government organizations (NGOs), community-based organizations, academic institutions, government agencies and UN agencies. At the same time, we commit to making big changes in small worlds through ongoing collaborations with our partners in targeted communities to promote comprehensive development in health and well-being and make major changes over the long term. Our approach recognizes a responsibility to our global community, while rooting our work in the fundamental rights to human dignity and self-determination.

Center for Global Health
Promoting equitable and sustainable community ownership of health and well-being