My research on generations and family structure has been widely reported in major newspaper, national radio programs, and several national magazines. This has included feature articles in the Los Angeles Times, a front page feature article in The Christian Science Monitor, and a cassette recording for Psychology Today, as well as many major newspapers. I have appeared on over thirty radio talk shows to discuss family related issues. Stations include PBS and network stations in Boston, New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

Work in Progress

1. Work with Brian Flay on Positive Action Interventions in Hawai'i, Utah, South Carolina, and Chicago

2. Work with Randal Day extending our work on family processes and well-being. In first year of a proposed seven year project
3. Working on appropriate methods for working with missing values
4. Working on applications of Rasch Modeling to improving measurement
5. Working on applications of the concept of Relative Density to longitudinal interventions where measures change over time
6. Working on text on advanced statistics with Peter Lachenbruch, a biostatistician and current President of the American Statistical Association
7. Grant Proposal to NSF on Missing Values and Variable Selection with Peter Lachenbruch and Terry Duncan.
