Food Hero Social Marketing Campaign

Food Hero is a social marketing campaign developed to boost fruit and vegetable consumption among limited-income Oregonians. The campaign was launched in 2008 when SNAP-Ed was awarded funds from Oregon Governor Ted Kulongoski's Health and Hunger Initiative. Food Hero is research-based and tested, with development and ongoing updates fully informed by the target audience. It is guided by the social cognitive and social diffusion theories, the social-ecological model of behavior change, and social marketing benchmark criteria. The Food Hero campaign is included in the peer-reviewed USDA SNAP-Ed Toolkit of Strategies and Interventions and highlighted in the most recent Land-Grant Universities SNAP-Ed Report and Executive Summary (2015).

At its core, Food Hero provides easy recipes that are low-cost, adaptable, healthy and delicious, plus practical tips for stretching food dollars and reducing food waste. In addition, the campaign builds cooking and meal-planning skills. Food Hero has multiple communication delivery channels: website, monthly message package, and educators on the ground in communities throughout the US and beyond who use the Food Hero community toolkit. A key component of the campaign, the community toolkit offers multiple research- and theory-backed tools that educators can use to promote, healthy behavior change in their communities.

While focusing on mothers and their children, Food Hero aims to create multi-level community change. Therefore, state and local partnerships promote policy-, systems- and environmental-change activities. In Oregon nearly 150 SNAP-Ed educators covering all counties promote Food Hero. They are joined by their community partners and our state-level partners and stakeholders. Moreover, as of 2017, Food Hero materials are being used in at least 42 US states.

Select List of Food Hero Materials Developed:

Website

2008-present. Tobey LN, Schrupf E, Wheeler T. Food Hero Campaign Website (www.foodhero.org). The campaign website includes tested recipes, ingredient-based tips and resources, and a community toolkit for all parts of Food Hero to be replicated. In 2017, the website hosted over 1.8 million unique visitors, representing a 19% increase from 2016. The site ranks within the top three hits on Google when search terms like "healthy fun recipes" (first) and "fast fun recipes" (third) are used. The website was developed to meet needs identified by the Food Hero target audience through formative focus groups and survey data. It was designed and is updated using feedback from original and ongoing research, the Health Literacy Online report, and input from Food Hero educators, partners, stakeholders, and the target audience. Hundreds of comments (nearly 900) on the website attest to Food Hero's positive impact. One site visitor wrote of a chili cheese hominy dish: "I love that it uses an ingredient that is low cost and I hadn't used before. I couldn't believe from the taste that it was really healthy?!?! I had to look at the nutrition info, and yes it really is healthy, low fat, and a good source of calcium [and vitamins] A and C!! I will make this again and again!!"

Monthly Magazine

2011-present. Tobey LN, Schrupf E, LaMotte L. Food Hero Monthly is an award-winning publication that features recipes and cooking and shopping tips in a magazine format. Each core issue features an ingredient typically grown in Oregon, and some special editions feature broader subjects. As of March 2018, there are 54 current issues of the English and Spanish versions. All topics and the design and title have been focus-group tested. Within Oregon SNAP-Ed alone, Food Hero Monthly is shared in Spanish and English through email to over 2,700 subscribers and is printed nearly 50,000 times each month. Email subscribers to the Monthly include Food Hero educators and stakeholders who also receive an update on the campaign. Food Hero Monthly is available at: <http://foodhero.org/monthly>.

Social Media Platform

2009-present. Tobey LN, McGraw L, Jackson B. Food Hero was one of the first social marketing campaigns to be approved within USDA, SNAP-Ed to use social media. Since its inception, the Food Hero social media platform (which includes daily postings to five social media sites) has focused on one featured food a month, while providing additional engaging content. Although it is difficult to quantify reach, the Food Hero social media platform grows annually, and in 2017 had 6,000+ followers. We continue to work on developing systems and tools to make postings more efficient and engaging, such as using research data and theory to develop posts, creating core posts a year in advance using our featured foods lists (<http://foodhero.org/featured-foods>), bulk uploading three months in advance using a social media aggregator, and compiling a food holiday calendar (<http://foodhero.org/holiday-calendar>). Our social media sites are accessible via links on the side bar of the Food Hero website at: www.foodhero.org. Related tools are available in the community toolkit at: <http://foodhero.org/social-media>.

Quantity Recipes

2015-present. Schrupf E. and Tobey LN. Food Hero worked with the Oregon Department of Education, Child Nutrition Programs (CNP) to make a select group of Food Hero recipes (n=72) at four quantity yields each. In addition, the team created multiple strategies to promote the use of the recipes, including adding them to the CNP culinary trainings for cooks in school cafeterias sponsored by the Oregon Dairy and Nutrition Council. The quantity recipes can be used by anyone cooking for a crowd, from moms at family events and potlucks, to school and childcare foodservice professionals and churches and other community groups. All Food Hero quantity recipes have been analyzed by CNP Specialists and meet the USDA meal pattern requirements for schools and child centers.

Oregon Harvest Project

2014-present. Tobey LN and Schrupf E. Food Hero partnered with the Oregon Department of Education and other state partners to revise the state's Oregon Harvest posters and to create child passports, stamps, teacher charts, and children's coloring sheets to match each Oregon Harvest ingredient. The Oregon Department of Education and our Food Hero educators use and promote these materials in schools across Oregon. This project is ingredient-focused, aligning with Food Hero research results indicating that our target audience often wants recipes and like to search for recipes by key ingredient. Materials available by ingredient can be found here: <http://foodhero.org/ingredients>.

Community Flyer Project

2017-present. Tobey LN, Jackson B. Food Hero educators use community flyers to promote their events. The Food Hero Community Flyer project was developed to make sure educators were able to easily include campaign-tested messages and professional design elements in their flyers, plus write text which adheres to the campaign's theory and research base. At the same time, the flyer project allows flexibility for community needs. The community flyer project has been adopted by SNAP-Ed educators statewide, and also within the Oregon 4H program. It is available at: <http://foodhero.org/flyer-templates>.

Bulletin Board Project

2016-present. Tobey LN, Jackson B. Food Hero educators have been increasing their access to bulletin board space in their communities, such as in schools, DHS offices and food pantries. The Food Hero Bulletin Board project was developed to help educators transform bulletin board space into billboards promoting healthy food and activity choices for the community. This toolkit of materials includes tested campaign messages and design elements, but still encourages individual creativity. The bulletin board project has been adopted by SNAP-Ed educators statewide. Available at: <http://foodhero.org/bulletin-boards>.

Curriculum

2007-2012. Langelotto G and Tobey LN. Growing Healthy Kids Curriculum. This peer-reviewed curriculum consists of 12 modules. The objectives of the curriculum are to: increase 7- and 8-year-olds' exposure to fruits and vegetables by having them assist in tending a garden; increase their consumption of fruits and vegetables; and model healthy food and lifestyle choices. The curriculum was created in partnership between SNAP-Ed (Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program-Education) and the Community Horticulture Faculty. I was the secondary author, and led the nutrition team on the project. In 2010, the curriculum was pilot-tested by nutrition educators across Oregon. In 2011, Growing Healthy Kids was taught in 18 out of Oregon's 36 counties. In 2012, a revised version was released and taught in 31 counties. Others that have adopted this curriculum include Rutgers University, the Department of Health in Maryland, and a nutrition educator in Indonesia.

Undergraduate Mentoring

Food Hero Student Coordinator Program

I began the Food Hero Student Coordinator Program in 2008. The program allows nutrition and public health students to join the Food Hero team as if they were core team members. The experience provides students with mentoring and "real life" nutrition experience. To date, all 15 Food Hero student coordinators have gone on to graduate from Oregon State University and successfully enter the field of nutrition professionally. Many went on to a dietetic internship to become registered dietitian nutritionists (RDNs). Every year Food Hero receives over 30 applicants to the program.

The Oregon State University undergraduate public health degree requires an internship, for which Food Hero can accept students as an extension of the Food Hero Student Coordinator program. The 2017-2018 program included the first student coordinator pursuing a public health degree, Mika Ingram. Mika graduated from OSU in 2018 and was accepted into an MS program in public health.
